Being a good example to others means choosing to do the right thing so that your actions show others you care for them. When you express your thankfulness to others, when you are polite and courteous, when you are forgiving of others, when you practice fairness in your actions, these are all ways that you are being a good role model to others.

Even when it's difficult, choose to do what's right, so that you're setting the right example to those around you. You'll also feel happier when you do what's right.

Put it into action:

There may be those who watch you and follow what you do, so do your best to do what you know is right and be a good role model.
